Most people who own cars only use them for a few hours each day. This means that many cars, which cost a lot of money, are not being used for most of the day. Now some people have thought of a new idea for a business that uses these cars. These new companies provide an important service to people who do not own cars.

For a long time, people have been helping their friends and co-workers who do not own cars by 15. However, the new car-sharing companies are changing this. Car owners sign up on a car-sharing company's website. They write the times that their car is available and how much it costs per hour. People who want to borrow a car can look for one on the company's website. They try to find a car near them that 16. If they find one, they can rent it. After using the car, they return it to the owner.

At first, some car owners were worried about sharing their cars with other people. However, the car-sharing companies came up with ways to make the services safer. For example, they check the driving history of borrowers. The companies also ask the owners to write comments about the borrowers. That way, other owners can know 17. Because of these changes, more and more people are using car-sharing services.

Many people have owned, or have heard of traditional “piggy banks,”—coin banks shaped like pigs. You might wonder how this tradition started. Some people think that pigs often symbolize greed, so the object is to “fatten” one’s piggy bank with as much money as possible.

However, while this idea makes sense, it is not the right origin. The genesis of the piggy bank is the old English word “pygg,” which was a common kind of clay hundreds of years ago in England. People used pots and jars to make the red “pygg” clay for many different purposes in their homes. Sometimes they kept their money in one of the pots, and this was known as a pygg bank. Over the years, because “pygg” and “pig” sounded the same, workers began to make pottery banks in the shape of a pig as a kind of joke. These banks were given as gifts and sent to countries where people spoke other languages and where no one had heard of pygg clay. The tradition caught on all over the world, and today piggy banks come in all colors and are made of all kinds of materials, including plastic.
