Jane Warner's husband, Jack, was sent to prison (監獄) for two years for stealing. When he was in prison, Jane had a very difficult time. She had two children, but no job. Her husband did not make any money, either. The only money she got was a small amount (少量) from the government(政府).

"I don't know what to do," she wrote to her husband in prison. "I get only enough money to pay the rent(房租). There isn't enough money for food. I think I'll have to plant vegetables in the garden. They'll grow quickly. We can live on vegetables."

When Jack Warner got his wife's letter, he replied to it right away. "Don't dig up the garden," he wrote. "That's the place where I stole money."

All letters written by the prisoners(犯人) were read by one of the guards before they were mailed. When the guard read Jack's letter, he telephoned the police. He told them what Jack had written to his wife.

The police immediately (立刻) went to Jack's house. They took pitchforks(乾草叉) and shovels (鏟子) with them. They dug up the garden, looking for the money, but they did not find anything.

When they had gone, Mrs. Warner wrote to her husband. "The police came today," she wrote. "They dug up all the grass. What should I do?"

Her husband wrote back at once(立刻), "Plant the vegetables."

30. () Where did Jane's money come from? (A) her husband (B) her job (C) her family (D) the government(政府)

32. () Why did the police go to Jack's house?

(A) They wanted to help dig the garden

(B) They were looking for the money he stole

(C) The guard asked them to

(D) Jack told them to

33. () Why did Jack lie about hiding the money in the garden?

(A) To make Jane dig up the garden

(B) So the police wouldn't guess where the money really was

(C) To make the police plant the vegetables

(D) To make the police dig up the garden.

(C)

A long time ago, there was a pretty princess falling in love with a handsome young man. The young man was only a commoner (平民), so they couldn't get married.

One day, the king saw them kissing each other at the garden, and he felt very angry. He ordered his soldiers to bring the young man to a big arena (竞技场). There were two doors in the arena. The king asked the man to open one of them. There was a tiger behind one of the doors, but there was a pretty woman behind the other door. If the man chose the wrong door, the tiger would eat him right away(立刻). But if he chose the right door, he could marry the woman and live a happy life. The man looked at the princess and wanted her give him a hint(暗示). Of course the princess knew the answer. She didn't want to see the tiger killing her lover, but she didn't want to see her lover marrying another woman, either. What would she do?

34. () When the young man opened one of the doors, what might he see?
