Smartphones have made it easy for people to surf the Internet at all times. Using smartphones is safe __30__ it is not done while driving. __31__, they put not only their lives but also those around them in danger.

Texting while driving is a big problem in the United States, __32__. According to the National Safety Council, about 660,000 drivers a day use their phones to check their calls, e-mails, messages, and more while driving. This leads to 1.6 million car accidents each year, and one out of every four of them was caused by texting while driving. In 2015, 391,000 people got hurt in car accidents that involved someone texting while driving. The same year, 3,477 people __33__ their lives to it.

Sadly, teenagers are four times more likely to get into these kinds of car accidents than grown-ups. Even though almost all of them know texting while driving is dangerous, __34__. Also, around 40% of them have been in cars where the driver was texting while driving. It's no surprise that 11 teenagers lose their lives every day because of this terrible problem.

As you can see, it's really a terrible idea to text while driving. So, it's best that you keep your eyes on the road whenever you are in the driver's seat.

Green Planet News

By Ella Burke

July 1, 2021

Global warming melts away the sea ice, and polar animals are getting into trouble as a result. They need the ice for traveling, hunting, and resting.

Take the polar bear for example. The main food source of polar bears are seals. Polar bears spend a lot of time on the ice while waiting for a seal to come up to an ice hole. With less ice, it is harder for polar bears to catch seals. A study says that if nothing is done to change this, two-thirds of the world's polar bears will be gone by 2050.

It is our business to save our home planet. We can help polar animals by making small changes. For example: turning off lights when leaving the room, and taking the metro to work more often instead of driving. These simple actions help to save polar animals and the Earth. As long as each of us can do a little, we will not only save polar animals but also the Earth. After all, we have only one Earth, don't we?

What do Leonardo da Vinci, Beethoven, and Wang Lee-hom have in common? Guess what! They're all left-handers. They are a group of people who usually feel the world with their left hand, and about one-tenth of the world's population belongs to this special group.

To help people understand left-handed people more, Lauren Milsom built the Left-Handers Club in 1990. The Left-Handers Club is the largest organization which has over 60,000 members around the world. The Left-Handers Club has three main missions. First, it provides training for parents and teachers of left-handed children, so they can learn the best way to teach their left-handed children to write easily. Second, the Left-Handers Club also tries to persuade companies or factories to design products for left-handers. Third, it also holds the International Left-Handers' Day. The first one was celebrated on August 13, 1992. On that day, people showed their thoughtfulness to left-handers by saying, “Happy Left-Handers' Day!”
