In 1955, Guinness World Records came out. Now, the book is becoming more and more popular. Each year, lots of people are trying to set a new record. It is said about twenty thousand records apply for being listed in the Guinness every year. However, only twenty of them can make it.

In the past, people did strange or dangerous things to be included in Guinness World Records. Here are some examples. One man set a record by wearing 70 socks on one foot. Another man held a record for having 79 spoons on his body. What's more, an American kicked himself on the head 57 times, and a man kept 109 bees in his mouth for 10 seconds. How crazy they are! For the health and safety of people, Guinness World Records has dropped some of the dangerous records and also set some rules to stop people from trying to set dangerous records.

Taiwan has had many successful records in the Guinness. Most of them are not only amazing facts but also great achievements. For example, Taiwan's Lin-Wan was the world's oldest elephant before it died at the age of 86. In 2003, 14,603 Taiwanese set a new record as the most people played Tai-Chi together. With the length of 1080m, Taiwan's dragon-shaped kite was the world's longest kite that could fly in the sky. In 2019, Wu Tsung-hsiu, a seven-year-old boy from Taichung had the largest medal sentence that consists of 158 gold medals.

Today, all the interesting records can be easily found in Guinness World Records. Following the trend for setting new world records, many people are still trying to break them.
