The following is what Eve said in an interview about her life:

"I can't thank the Watsons enough for taking me in and making me a part of their family. Never in my wildest dreams did I think they would take a chance on a teenager like me, but I'm glad they did.

As the oldest in Glory House, I had given up on anybody wanting me. That's because most of the couples that I saw there wanted babies first. I can understand that because the babies would grow up and not have any memory of their real parents. Then, if the couples had no other choice, they would consider the younger children. Very few of them ever looked my way, so I stopped making an effort and just kept to myself.

On the day that Becky and Jim showed up, I was reading a book in the far corner of the yard. I was surprised when they came over and sat down beside me. They asked me about the book and how I liked it, and I told them what I really felt. Becky liked how I saw the story because she had felt the same way when she read it as a kid. Jim liked the way I spoke my mind, even to strangers. He saw how strong and confident I was. They told me later that was the moment they knew I was the one for them."

(During the class)

Ms. Jackson: Please don't forget your homework is due tomorrow, and so is your project.

Students: Yes, Ms. Jackson.

Ms. Jackson: Very well, now please open your textbooks to page 20. Morris, please read the first paragraph.

Morris: ...

Ms. Jackson: Morris? Please read paragraph one on page 20.

Flora: Hey, look! Morris looks like a little tomato!

Hank: Ha, ha! He's too red to read!

(The teacher stops to look at Morris)

Ms. Jackson: Everyone, please be quiet. Morris, don't worry, it's ok to blush.

Morris: R-r-really?

Ms. Jackson: Yes! It's a very normal thing to do. Actually, it's a very good thing to do.

Hank: That can't be true! You're joking, right, Ms. Jackson?

Flora: I agree. There's no way that something so embarrassing could be good.

Ms. Jackson: Ah, but that's where you're wrong! You see, blushing means you're a really nice person!

Morris: So... I'm a nice person?

Ms. Jackson: That's right! Because blushing means you're worried about bothering other people.

Hank: I must be a nice person, too! I always turn red when I try to lie to my parents.

Flora: Ha, ha! That just means you're bad at telling lies!

Ms. Jackson: Although that is true, it also means that Hank knows that telling lies is bad, and he blushes because he feels bad about doing it. So, that's good!

Morris: I... blush... all the time.

Ms. Jackson: Oh! So that means you must be a really nice person!

Flora: Well, I blush when I answer questions in class. Isn't that right, Ms. Jackson?

Ms. Jackson: That's right, Flora, you do. It means you're worried about seeming like a know-it-all.

Flora: Because I don't want other people to feel bad they didn't know the answer, right?

Ms. Jackson: Bingo!

Hank: I can feel myself blush when I play a trick on other people! I turn so red that my face gets hot!

Flora: You SHOULD! You should be nice to others!

Ms. Jackson: I guess this means you've known they were inappropriate all along, right, Hank?

(Hank blushes)

Hank: Yeah... I guess so.

Ms. Jackson: So you see, children, blushing isn't bad, and neither is being a nice person. It just means you're too nice to be bad!
